How I Survive the Hospital Shift Marathon: Eat Like an Athlete. It's eight hours into a 12-hour shift, and I'm running on empty. I reach for a slice of birthday cake that's been sitting in the break room all day. The sugar fix helps me bounce back—for about 45 minutes.

How I Survive the Hospital Shift Marathon: Eat Like an ...

Let me just say, I survived the psychiatric hospital. I went back to work on schedule. My arms were bruised from the multiple blood tests. Again, they'd given me lithium, which demanded frequent blood exams to get the blood level right. Although it was late August and 90 degrees, I wore long sleeves to class. A small price to pay.
